the incipient radical revolts, which is parent the constitutional Democratic majority must continually contend with broke out to-day in the lower House of the Parliament, when labor members introduced resolutions for the immediate submission to Emperor Nicholas by telegraph of a demand that amnesty be proclaimed at once.

In view of the May Day demonstrations and the arrests that are expected to morrow, the constitutional Democratic leaders were scarcely able to stage off so precipitate a move, which would undo all the results of their moderation by sending their best orators into the fray, when Professor Kovalevsky, a free-lance member, proposed that instead of telegraphing the House, send President Mouromisest to Peterhof with the request for immediate amnesty.

This threatened to sweep the House, but the constitutional Democrats managed to sidetrack the matter until after the selection of a commission, which according to Russian procedure, occupied several hours, and then were able to defeat them.

After this event the lower House adjourned until Tuesday, May Day was not mentioned, but abandonment of the seison to-morrow was dictated out of respect for the socialist holiday as well as with the desire to give the commission adequate time to draft the reply to the speech from the throne.

BODY OF GAPON FOUND IN VILLA

Mystery of Fate of Russian Priest Cleared Up By Discovery

(By Associated Press.)

ST. PETERSBURG, May 13.—The mystery of the fate of Father Gapon apparently was cleared up to-day by the discovery of a corpse which had almost positively been identified as that of the former priest, hanging in the upper chamber of a lonely villa in the summer submit of Ozerki, Finland.

The villa was rented on April 8th for the summer, and a deposit paid by an unknown man from St. Petersburg, who, after visiting the house several times in the summer, and a deposit paid by an unknown man from St. Petersburg, who, after visiting the house several times in company with a young workman, disappeared April 11th, taking the key with him. The proprietress of the villa, alarned at the non-appearance of the tenant, notified the police, who entered the house. Breaking down a door, they were confronted by a body in a long coat hanging from a nail, the foot touching the floor. Decomposition of the face made positive identification difficult, but the features resembled those of Gapon and the clothing corresponded with that worn by the missing labor leader.

As the usual symptoms of strangulation were absent, it is conjectured that the man was killed elsewhere and his body brought to the villa on the night of April 10th. This would agree with the date of the execution of Gapon, given in information of the secret police, and with the death sentence of the former priest, as announced in recent dispatches from Berlin.

PRESIDENT'S PRAISE FOR ENLISTED MEN

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 13,—President Roosevelt to-day visited the Soldlers', Sallors' and Marines' Club, of this city, which is supported by the wives and widows of enlisted men. The President was accompanied by Lieutenant Philip Sheridan. The President, after inspecting the club house, made a speech, in which he referred to the duties of the enlisted men, complimented them in their work, and pointed out the importance of their constant preparedness for duly. He spoke of his experieces in the Cuban campaign. All of those present sang "My Country," Tis of Thee," and the President Joined heartly in the singing. He was elected an honorary member of the club.

"WISH I COULD DIE." SAID MAN AND DROPPED DEAD

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
LEXINGTON, KY., May 13.—'I wish I could die," said Austin Stephens, an inmate of the Bourbon county Almshouse, when the keeper ordered him to take a bath. Stephens reductantly picked up a bucket and started to a spring nearby to secure the water, walked a few steps and fell. When picked up by fine keeper to whom he had just said that he wished he could die, Stephens was dead.

PRINCESS GIVES THANKS FOR SAFE JOURNEY

(By Associated Press.) (By Associated Press.)

LONDON, May 13.—Following the precedent established by his father when he returned from India thirty years ago, the Prince of Wales to-day publicly gave thanks for his safe journey to the Indian empire at a service held in Westminster Abbey. The service was attended by King Edward and all the members of the royal family, now here, a contingent of officers and sallors which accompanied the Prince on the trip, a distinguished company from the households of the King and the Prince of Wales and a large assemblage of the general public. Among the notable per-sons present was Bishop Potter, of New York, who sat next to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Strenuous at Brandon.

It was at "Brandon," where the ship stopped on the homeward trip, that the affair became strenuous, for in the crush of landing the two women began a lively game of "snatch-purse."

A well known young lady had her purse seized, but she held on while one of the thieves endeavored to twist it out of her hand. In the scuffle the purse fell to the ground and the pickpocket made her escape while the young lady was picking up her property.

While the party was on land Mr. Leland Rankin, who remained in the cabin, observed the two women at work, going through the baskets and wraps that had been left behind. Mr. Rankin payedlittle attention to this incident until he learned of the pocketbook episode, when he at once organized a search party to expressed the thickes.

Scarched the Steamer.

Mr. Rankin had noticed one of the women particularly, Bhe was a blonds, dressed in black, and felt sure he would know her if he saw her again.

A committee, consisting of Mr. Rankin. Mr. Robert A. Lancaster and Mr. Fred Pleasants, went over the ship no less than six times, but although the search lasted from the time the Pocahontas left Brandon until Richmond was reached, the thieves were not apprehended.

It is thought that possibly the two women changed their dresses and probably their appearance after the pockethook episode, and so avoided capture.

The incident was much talked of yesterday by those who made the trip.

Mr. Rankin, who saw both the women, is positive that they were strangers, and thinks that they must have been "professionals," on account of the clever way they handled the affair.

Mr. Lancaster said last night that he made a diligent investigation to ascertain if anyone lost anything during the day, but in every instance was informed that nothing had been stolen.

The thieves who have been "working" the churches during services have not yet been brought to justice, as was evidenced yesterday morning at the Monumental Episcopal Church, when a fine hat and a parasol belonging to Miss Reca W. The entire end of North Seventeenti Street and a large portion of Church IIIII were all agog yesterday with the excitement of the sensational disappearance of Bethel Claude Deaton, a married man with a wife and one child living in this city, and simultaneously that of Miss Mary Bradley, a youthful blonde, residing with Mrs. J. The French leave of Deaton is quite sensational, owing to the destitute and sorrowful circumstances in which the husband left his wife, who is at present at the boarding house of Mrs. Luin Freeman, 108 North Buchanan Street, without a cent of money or any prospect of making a livelihood. Miss Bradley, who is also missing, was a well-known young lady of the Hill, having made a great number of friends during the three years in which she has boarded with Mrs. Baker.

day's past been touching on local affairs in a most interesting fashion. Last night he made a number of observations about Sunday excursions, women's hats and riding street-cars on Sunday that were very interesting.

His text was "The Sabbath Was Made for Man, and Not Man for the Sabbath." "He does not say, "Eegp the Sabbath if it suits you,"! said the pastor, "but He demands that this day be made a day of rest." The wear and tear of body, soul and spirit naturally demands this seventh-day rest; and, if men do not take this rest, they will kill themselves with work, and men have no more right to kill themselves that way than with a pistol.

No Quiet Nook for Him.

Mr. Maxey went on to say that men must not possider rest as the lack of action, because for most people that was harder than work. "I do not take any vacation; that is not because I love you so. Entire relaxation of mind and body, such as sitting under a tree in the quiet country, is hard on me. It is just as severe on me as the ancient Jews made their Sunday. They would not light a fire to make a cup of coffee for a man with the chills on the seventh day."

Mr. Maxey objected to people taking the Sunday excursions to the senshore. Instead of a rest, such excursions were really a labor and were one out. The preacher said that during the day he had taken a street car ride; had gone out to preach at the Confederate Home. "I suppose when people saw me they "I suppose when people saw me they said: 'He kicked up the devil about dancing, and here he is riding on a street car on Sunday."

But I went on a mission of mercy to save the souls of those old men who have not very long to live."

After his seemon, the preacher begged to make an announcement which he had forgotten at the opening of the services. He said that the weather was getting warm, and if the ladies would not dress up so much, and come without their hats, it would be much more satisfactory to the people who sat behind them. He said that formerly the style of ladies' headgear had been large, round brims, but now they shot up high in the air at the back, which made it just as impossible to see past them. to see past them.
